Dear Mr. Paen:

I have reviewed several episodes of the program "SKOOLED" and I am confident that it meets the educational and informational needs of children 13 to 16 years of age with its program content.

The series explores a unique perspective – students teaching teachers. The students prepare lessons for their teachers and discuss as a group the appropriate grade for each teacher. Students discover the challenges of teaching, the need for clear communication and the individual differences of their students (the teachers).

SKOOLED is truly a creative series. Both teachers and students seem to enjoy this role reversal. I think this series would stimulate some interesting discussion for both teachers and students.

Sincerely,

Sister Mary Elizabeth Galt, B.V.M.

Dear Alex,

I have reviewed several episodes of the series "SKOOLED" and believe that it meets the educational and informational needs of children 13 to 16 years of age with its program content. The show highlights many issues that face today's teens in school. It's the ultimate learning experience for kids who swap roles with teachers—and both students and teachers better understand what it means to be the other. The teen students learn how difficult it is for teachers today while teachers get a lesson in being students. This unusual role-reversal teaches kids and adults important differences and the episodes address concerns each has with the other.

"SKOOLED" is very enlightening and a valuable way for teenage viewers to appreciate their academic decision-making.

Sincerely,
